ADVERTISEMENT.

This volume exceeds the second, numerically, by fifty-six pages; and, materially, in proportion of, at least, one hundred and sixty, from the close printing adopted at page 249: a circumstance which will account for some delay in its publication. As time throughout many countries of Asia, is the chief criterion by which distances are ascertained, the hour of departure from one stage and of arrival at another, is, in general, noticed with minute accuracy; and that future travellers may furnish their private stores accordingly, the principal articles of food at different places, are particularly mentioned, -some stages abounding with those which others altogether want. In a few copies the reference to Plate LVII (View of the mountains near Isfahan) has been omitted; it should have occurred in p. 41, line 5, after the word "right." And in p. 500, line 2, after "appearance," should have been a reference to the View of Tosiah, Plate LXXX. The Turkish names of places between Kars and Scutari are given from a list obligingly communicated by Mr. Pisani, chief Dragoman to the British Embassy at Constantinople.

Crickhowel, Brecknockshire: June 4th, 1893.

CONTENTS.

		n A . 1 191 17 2.1 2.1
Chapter	XIII.	Account of Ispahan or Isfahan, and of the River Zendeh rud,
Chapter		according to Eastern writers	1
	VIV	Paridence at Ienahan	19
	AIV.	Journey from Ispahan to Tehran	75
	XV.	Journey from Ispanan to Tentan	115
	YVI	First Residence at Tehran, and visit to the ruins of Rai or Rages	110
	VV11	Excursion to the Caspian Sea, through the province of Mazen-
		Journ and matter to Tehran	200
		geran; and retain to remain	337	4
	XVIII.	Second residence at Tehran and Journey to Tabriz		ğ.
	$\Lambda I \Lambda$ .	Constantinople, Smyrna, and return to England	520	M
	XX.	Constantinople, Smyrna, and return to England	•	-

APPENDIX.

No. 1, References to Plate LIX, (Miscellaneous Antiques), p. 548. No. 2, Persian Pictures in Plate LXI explained, p. 544. No. 3, Caspian Strait, p. 545. No. 4. Caspian Sea, p. 550. No. 5, Explanation of Plate LXXXI, p. 552. No. 6, Eastern Manuscripts, p. 558. No. 7, Explanation of Plate LXXIX, p. 560. No. 8, Plate LXXXII, (the last or Miscellaneous) explained, p. 561. No. 9, Additional remarks, Corrections of errours, Omissions supplied, &c. p. 568. First Index, (Texts of the Bible quoted or illustrated) p. 575. Second (or Geographical) Index, p. 576. Third (or General) Index, p. 589.

Errata at the end.

Besides two Maps, (No. III. and No. IV) and the wood-cut (in p. 842), this third volume contains twenty-seven Plates, of which the last is numbered LXXXII.

TRAVELS

IN ARIOUS COUNTRIES OF THE ## EAST;

MORE PARTICULARLY

PERSIA.

work wherein the Author has described, as far as his own Observations extended, the State of those Countries in 1810, 1811, AND 1812;

and has endeavoured to illustrate many subjects of

ANTIQUARIAN RESEARCH,

tiory, Geography, Philology and Miscellaneous Literature, with extracts from rare and valuable Oriental Manuscripts.

BY SIR WILLIAM OUSELEY, KNIGHT.

Honorary

D. (Oxford, and Dublin), Fellow of the Royal Societies of Edinburgh, in gen, and Amsterdam; Doctor of Philosophy in the University of Rostoch; by of the Asiatisk Society of Calcutta, of the Royal Asiatisk Society of Londard of the Litterary and Philosophical Society of Newcastles &c.; and

PRIVATE SECRETARY TO EXCELLENCY SIR GORE OUSELEY, BARONET, K. L. S.

MAJESTY'S AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENTPOTENTIARY AT THE COURT OF PERSIA.

LONDON:

PUBLISHED BY RODWELL AND MARTIN, NEW BOND STREET.

AINTED FOR THE AUTROR BY PRISCILLA HUGHES, BRECKNOCK.

1823.

910.8 910.8 9.94.8

$7. 75 039/5E0

2<sup>2</sup>280

TRAVELS

IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES

OF

THE EAST.

CHAPTER XIII.

Account of Ispahán or Isfahán, and of the River Zendehrúd, according to Eastern writers.

BEFORE I record the transactions which immediately followed our arrival at Isfahán, or describe any of the objects noticed there, it seems necessary that I should examine the information given by Eastern writers on the subject of this celebrated city; having previously remarked, that while, in conformity with modern pronunciation, the name throughout my pages generally appears Isfahán yet it is more properly Ispahán (المنهائ), or, according to the strictness of orthography, Asp-hán, Aspahán. That this represents the ancient Aspadana, although placedby Ptolemy, in Persis, (Lib. VI. c. 4, As. tab. 5) can scarcely be doubted: of their identity the excellent D'Anville (Geogr. Anc.) was convinced; and his opinion has been adopted by De la Rochette and Barbié du Bocage(1).

The name written Spahán (or Sepahán) thus process occurs three or four times in the Bundehesh, an extraordinary Pahlavi composition, of which I was so fortunate as to procure a well-writen copy from one of the Parsis or Fireworshippers at Bombay. M. Anquetil du Perron, who with considerable ingenuity and accuracy translated the Bundehesh into French, retricts its antiquity to the seventh century; although he regards it as a compilation formed from Zend originals, older not only than the Christian era, but probably than the victories of Alexander(2).

The next work, according to chronological order, wherein I have found notice of Isfahán, is the "Book of Conquests," that valuable record quoted (see Vol. II, p. 312) as the

(¹) See M. de la Rochette's map "Indiæ Veteris," &c. which I have already noticed with due praise, (Vol. II. p. 174); and the Geographical "Analyse," &c. subjoined by M. Barbié du Bocage, to the "Examen Critique des Historiens d'Alexandre" of Baron de Sainte Croix, (2d edit. Paris, 1804, p. 817).

<sup>(*) &</sup>quot;Le mont Bakhtan est dans Sepahan." See "Zendavesta," Tome. II. p. 868; and p. 393. "Le Khrei roud a sa source dans Sepahan," &c. See also p. 337 and p. 338, concerning the antiquity of the Bundehesh.

Táríkh or chronicle of EBN AASIM of Cúfa, who flourished in the eighth century, soon after Persia had yielded to the Muselmán arms, of which he has traced the progress and success. This author describes Ispahán, Spahán, or Isfahán, (for it is so written in different copies) as furnishing twenty thousand men, to the army which assembled and fought in the great battle at Nihávend, (or Nuhávend) against the forces of OMAR the Arabian Khalifah in 641(3).

About this time, as we learn from TABRI (an historian of the ninth century), HURMUZA'N, a Persian prince and general, considered Ispahán as the head; Párs and Kirmán the hands; and Hamadán and Raji as feet of the empire (4); but Spahán is <sup>(*)</sup> On this occasion the Persian army consisted of one hundred and fifty thousand men, suvar u piadah (سوارو بياده) horse and foot, selected from different parts of the empire, according to EBN AASIM's account, in the following proportions. Rai, Semnan, Dameghan and the neighbouring places contributed 20,000 men. Hamadán and Sáveh, 10,000. Nuhávend, 10,000. Kum and Cáshán, 20,000. Isfahán. 20,000. Párs and Kirmán, 40,000; and Aderbaiján, 30,000. Respecting the name I find it accented with fatteh on the first syllable, Nahavend, by EBN KHA-LECA'N who observes that some have accented it with damm, calling it Nuhavend; signifying أوند Nuhh or Noah, and avend نوح Nuhh or Noah, and avend an edifice; the city having been founded by Noah, (See EBN KHA'LECA'N in ABU AL KA'SIM JUNEID (ابو القاسم جنيد). The Geographer SA'DEK ISFAHA'NI accents it also Nuhávend (in his MS. Tukwim al beldán تقريم البلدان). But the Dict. Burhán Katea marks the first syllable with kesr, and derives the name from & nih equivalent to shahr (شهر) a city; and أوند dvend, the jars or vases manufactured there in great numbers. But this Dictionary also notices it as accented Nahavend and Nuhawend, and its derivation from Nouh and avend, signifying a throne or seat.

<sup>(4)</sup> كه ان (اصفهان) پادشاهي عجم را نجاي سرست و پارس و كرمان دو دست. So my oldest copy of l'ABRI's Chronicle; the second MS. و ري وهمدان دو پايم.

noticed in a former part of Tabri's chronicle as having been the country of Ka'veh (%) a celebrated black-smith, to whose assistance the mighty Feridu'n was indebted for his throne seven or eight hundred years before Christ. The name of Isfahán or Spahán frequently occurs in the Sháh Námeh of Firdausi; first, I believe, in a line which alludes to Ka'veh, the personage above-mentioned(5).

a wealthy and flourishing city, remarkable for its fruits, and manufactories of silk and linen, according to his printed work, p. 169; in this account the Sûr al beldûn agrees, that fine MS. copy of his work so often quoted; and it adds, that sfahûn consists of two towns, the first called Yehûdîah, the other Medînah or the city"(6); that they were separated by a small interval, both having mosques, and their houses being constructed of clay; and that "this city is the great mart for Pârs, and Kûhestân, and Khurâsân, and Khûzistân; and "the very beautiful and costly garments made here of cotton; "embroidered scarlet stuffs, and silk, are highly prized and sent all over Irâk, and into Pârs, and every part of Kûhestân and Khurâsân, and Khurâsân, and the different regions of Islâm. Saffron, "and Khurâsân, and the different regions of Islâm. Saffron, <sup>(*) &</sup>quot;Thy father was of Sfahan, a worker in iron," بدرت از صفاهای بد اهنگری "I suspect that this line has crept into some copies of Firdausi's work, (for it does not eccur in all) from the poem of his preceptor Asedi, mentioned in Vol. I. p. 48, note 68.

<sup>(6)</sup> رو اما اصفهان دو شهر است اول پهوديه و ديكر مدينه

"also, abounds in this place; and the fruits are much finer than those produced in any other country; and on account of their superior flavour and fragrance, they are exported throughout  $Ir\acute{a}k$ ; and from  $Ir\acute{a}k$  to  $Khur\acute{a}s\acute{a}n$  there is not any spot, except  $Ra\ddot{a}$ , that yields so many comforts and "luxuries of life" (7).

As the word Yehúdi signifies "a Jew", we might infer from the name Yehúdiah that this place had formerly been a Jewish settlement; the following extract from the Seir al belád will tend to confirm this inference. Having declared Isfahán (in the fourth climate) to be one of the most considerable and delightful cities of Persia, excelling more particularly in the purity of air and fertility of soil, in the beauty, accomplishments and virtues of its inhabitants, (on which subjects some verses are quoted) the Manuscript proceeds to state that "the ancient town was denominated Jei, and is said to "have been founded by Iscander; it was a place of great "size, and named Yehúdíah having been thus peopled;

(&lt;sup>7</sup>) و آن قرضه پارس و کوهستان و خراسان و خورستانست و جامها با قیمت بغایت لطافت مثل عالی و نکار کرده و سقلاطویات و تنامت حامها آریشم و پنبه از انجا مرتبع می باشد و در عراق و پارس و تمامت کوهستان و خراسان و غیران از شهرها اسلام از آن حال می کنند و نقل می افند و زعفران بسیار نیز در انجا می باشد و میرها آنجا بر فواکه دیکر مواضع فضل و ترجیع دارد و از لذت و بوی خوش که انرا هست از آن در عراق حمل می افند و از عراق تاخراسان بغیر از ری شهری با خصب و راحت و خیرودعت و عیش و مسرت در آن بیشتر از اصفهان نیست

"when BAKHTNASSER led away captive from Jerusalem the most ingenious artists, they arrived at the spot where Isfahân now stands; and finding that in the qualities of air and water it resembled their holy city, they chose it for their residence and established themselves there" (8).

Some passages must now be extracted from Hamdalland Cazvi'ni's description of Isfahán, and its four hundred dependent villages, comprised in eight districts, among which I find mentioned as first, the territory of Jei bordering on the city (جي در حوالي شهر). This account was written in the fourteenth century; when, says our author, Isfahán was reckoned by some as belonging to the fourth climate, but according to the calculation of longitude and latitude, men of science placed it in the third. From the Fortunate Islands, he adds, its longitude is 86, 40, and its latitude, from the equinoctial line 32, 25. "Originally," continues the Persian geographer, "it consisted of four villages, Karran, Deri-i-رقم مدیند قدیمه جي نام داشت کویند ان از بناهاي اسکندر است و شهر کاني بود انرا یهودیه کفتندي و کیفیة اباداني ان بریتمنول است که مختنصر ایل کاني بود انرا یهودیه کفتندي و کیفیة اباداني ان بریتمنول است که مختنصر ایل کانی بود انرا یهودیه کفتندي و هواي باسیري اورده چون نجاي که اصفهانست رسیدند المقدس مناسبت یافتند بنابر ان انرا جهت المقدس مناسبت یافتند بنابر ان انرا جهت (MS. Seir al belâd. Clim. IV).

The reader of my former volumes will probably recollect that Iscander of Secander is Alexander the Great, and Bakhtnasser is Nebuchadnezzar. See what Major Rennell has ingeniously collected from various authors respecting the Jewish settlement at Ispahân. (Geog. of Herodot p. 398). The word Jei in Pahlavi signified pure, or excellent," and is still added to the names of fire-worshippers at Bombay, and Surat, as Da'rabjei, Bahra'mjei, &c.

" kûshk, Júbáreh and Deridesht, with certain arable lands. "Of those, some part may be ascribed to TAHMURATH the "Pishdadian monarch, and some to Jemshi'd; but the "greater portion to DHU'L'-KARNEIN, the "two-horned;" "or Alexander. When CAI KOBA'D, first sovereign of the "Caiánian dynasty made this place his capital, great multi-"tudes of people assembled there; buildings were erected. " without the villages, which being united by degrees, formed "at length a considerable city.' RUKN AD'DOULEH HASSAN, "son of Bu'iah, surrounded it (in the tenth century of "Christ) with a rampart, of which the circumference amounts "to twenty one thousand paces; this was constructed under "the Zodiacal sign of Sagittarius; the city is divided into "forty four districts, and has nine gates; its climate is tem-"perate both in summer and winter, and the heat is never "so excessive, nor the cold, as to impede the business of "any person. Earthquakes, rain and lightning are here " seldom destructive; in the earth of this place dead bodies "decay but slowly; and it preserves for several years what-"ever grain or other substances may be deposited therein; "the plague and paralytick diseases are very rare. The river "Zendehrúd passes by Isfahán on the south-western side, and "from its stream many canals or conduits flow through the "city; there is well-water also at the distance (or depth) of five "or six yards, nearly equal in salubrity and pleasant flavour to "the water of the river; and whatever seeds are brought from "any other place and sown here, will be found, if they should "not improve, at least not to degenerate, except pomegran"ates; which never thrive at Isfahán; and even this circum"stance demonstrates the excellence of its climate and water,

"for pomegranates flourish most in an impure air" (9).

Then follow the praises of those fruits for which Isfahan has at all times been remarkable; the apples, quinces, pears, apricots, melons, and various others, so celebrated that they are exported to India and Asia Minor(10). Hamdallah

(ق) در اصل چهار ده بوده است کران و درکوشک و جوباره و دردشت با چند مزرعه بعضی طهمورث بیشدادی و چندیرا چمشید و ذوانقرنین اکثررا ساخته بودند چون کیقباد اول کیانیان انرا دارالملک ساخت کثرت مردم انجا بهمرسید در بیرون دهها عمارت میکردند بندریج باهم پیوست و شهری بزرک شد رکی الدوله حسن بن بویه ارا بارو کشید و دورش بیست و یکهزار کام است طالع عمارتش برج توس است چهل و چهار محله و نه دروازه دارد هوای آن معتدل است در تاستان و زمسان و کرما و سرما جان نبود که کسیرا از کار باز دارد و زلزله و بارندکی و صاعقه که موجب خرای باشد کمتر در آن اتعاق انتد خاکش مرد درا دیر زیراند و هر چه بدان سپارند از غله و غیره نیکو نکاه دارد و تا چند سال تباه نکند و درد و پیماری مزمن و و با کمتر برد زنده رود در جانب قبله بر ظاهر شهر میکذرد و از و پیماری مرض و و با کمتر برد زنده رود در جانب قبله بر ظاهر شهر میکذرد و از و رود نزدیک بود و هر تخم که از جای دیکر بانجا بردند و زرع کنند اگر بهتر از مقام اول برندهد کمتر از آن نباشد الا آنار که آنجا نیکو نیاید و آن نیز از نیکویی آنجاست اول برندهد کمتر از آن نباشد الا آنار که آنجا نیکو نیاید و آن نیز از نیکویی آنجاست که آنار در هوای متعنی نیک اید (شهر میکند اگر بهتر از مقام الله که آنار در هوای متعنی نیک اید (شهر که آنجا نیکو نیاید و آن نیز از نیکویی آنجاست که آنار در هوای متعنی نیک اید (شهر که آنجا نیکو نیاید و آن نیز از نیکویی آنجاست که آنار در هوای متعنی نیک اید (شهر که آنجا نیکو نیاید و آن نیز آن نیکویی آنجاست که آنار در هوای متعنی نیک اید (شهر که آنجا نیکو نیاید و آن نیز آن نیکویی آنجاست که آنواند که آنجا نیکویی آند که آنجا نیکویی آندگی در در که آنجا نیکویی آند که آنجا نیکویی آنوند که آنجا نیکویی آنوند که آنو اید که آنواند که که آنواند که آنواند که آنواند که آنواند که آنواند که آنواند که آنوا

which I do not recollect to have seen in Persia, nor does he explain the name; but that it was a kind of pear, which in the soil of Isfahán acquired a flavour peculiarly exquisite, we learn from the MS. Seir al belád. The name Rúm (ووم) which I have translated Asia Minor, is sometimes extended to Greece; but properly signifies (as HAMDALLAH describes it a the seventh chapter of his Geography) the present Turkish empire or western part of Asia, bounded by the Euxine and Mediterranean seas, and by an imaginary line from the borders of Georgia and Armenia to the extremity of Syria near Egypt.

proceeds to describe the pasture-lands which in a surprising manner fatten and strengthen cattle; the plains and admirable hunting-grounds abounding in game of every kind; he informs us that in the city were many publick edifices; at one of these (a madrasseh or college) in the Gulbar (کلیار) district, which contained the body of SULTA'N MUHAMMED, the Seljukian, was preserved a stone weighing about two thousand mans, brought from India, where it had been esteemed the chief idol; and the people of that country offered, but in vain, to redeem it at any price. He then observes that the inhabitants of Isfahân are fair-complexioned; notices their religious sects, the difference of which caused much strife and contention; he quotes some epigrammatical verses, and an Arabian prophecy respecting Deja'l (نجال) the false Messiah or Antichfist, who, it is said, shall come from the Yehudiah of Isfahán, or the Jewish quarter above-mentioned. One district, he says, the Shahristán (شهرستان) called also Shahr-inow (شَهر نو) or the new town, was founded by Secander or Alexander, and rebuilt by FIRU'z, the Sasanian king; and in the territory of Marbin (ماربيي) there was a castle erected by TAHMURATH, and this castle has been denominated Ateshgah, (اتشكاه) as Ванман the son of Asfendya'r constructed a Fire-temple within it.

Having enumerated the districts and their respective villages. (many of which contained, in his time, a thousand houses families) the geographer closes this account of Isfahan by calculating its distance from several other places; and as the statement appears sufficiently correct and may be useful to future travellers, I have subjoined it in the Appendix.

EBN VARDI, in one copy of his Arabick work, devotes but a single line to Isfahán, celebrating the excellence of its air, soil and water. This line occurs also in my second copy; (a fine Manuscript) which has, besides, the following brief account of Isfahán: "it consists of two towns; one called "Yehúdíah, the other Shahr báneh; and these constitute at present the most flourishing and abundant city of Jebál (Irák Ajemi or Parthia) and the largest; here are manufactured embroidered garments of various kinds, silk and cotton; sañron grows here in great profusion, and is sent from this place to other countries" (11).

AMI'N AHMED RA'zı (اسي احبد راري), author of a history of the Persian poets, entitled Haft aklim (هنت انايم) or the "Seven "Climates," has illustrated his work with much geographical matter, and in the description of Isfahán borrows from the Seir al belád (or Athar al belád), and the Nuzhat al culûb many passages which I have already extracted from these Manuscripts and, therefore, shall not here repeat. His account them المعبهان وهي مدينتان تسمي احدا هما اليهوديد و الأحري شهربانه و هما لله المعبهان وهي مدينتان تسمي احدا هما اليهوديد و الخطري والمعال و الرعفران بها المعال و الوعفران بها المدير و القطن و الزعفران بها الله (MS. Karraied or Kheridet at addict) المعبه الله يعمل منها الي ساير البلاد وتعدد Shahrbaneh us in the Ms. but doubt its correctness.

proceeds to state that concerning the foundation of Isfahan there have been many contradictory opinions; several ascribing it to Ispana'n a descendant of Ya'fet (or Japhet); whilst others regard it as the work of Ispaha'n son of Sa'm (or Shem) the son of Noah; and some have affirmed that Isfahûn is a name formed of words implying "the city of horsemen;" others declare that Isfahan is the general denomination of the whole territory; "and, adds our author, "it is mentioned in the Ajaïeb al beldán or "Wonders of "Regions" that this city was, at a very early period, styled "Yehudiah or the Jewish settlement; because the children of "Israel when they fled from BAKHT AL NASSER, carried "with them some of the clay or earth from Jerusalem, and "having wandered through the world they found that the "soil of Isfahan resembled the earth of their original sacred "habitation; and there they erected a city and called it "Yehúdíah"--- "Isfahán is situate on the banks of the river "Zendehrúd, or as some express the name Záïendehrúd; and "from this stream a thousand and one channels have been "cut, which supply abundantly with water the eight beluks "or districts" (12). AHMED RAZI has not omitted to notice the antiseptick quality of the earth, the purity of air, and the excellent fruits of Isfahán; where, he adds, venomous creatures such as snakes and scorpions are seldom discovered; he praises the publick buildings; the gardens and baths; and in conclusion, quotes a poem of the celebrated Khakani, extravagantly representing that city as a perfect paradise; Egypt (or its capital) as less important than the district of Jei; and the far-famed Nile inferior to the Zendehrúd(18).

<sup>(12)</sup> و در عبایب البلدان اورده که ان شهررا در قدیم یهودیه خواندندی که بیاعث المعدسرا ایکه چون. بنی اسرایل از بخت النصر بکریختند یارد از خاک بیت المعدسرا مرکزننه کرد عالم میکردیدند چون خاک اصفهان را موافق خاک بیت المعدس یافتند انها شهری بنا کرده موسوم بیهودیه و شهر اصفهان بر کنارد ایب زنده رود که بعثو مزاینده رود اعتبار کرده اند واقعست و از زنده رود هزار و یک نهر جدا شود و ششت بمود مراکنایت کرد الله المعال کرده اند واقعست و از زنده رود هزار و یک نهر جدا شود و ششت بمود مراکنایت کرد

The name is variously expressed; and I have found it indifferently written in Manuscripts of equal authority, Zendehrúd, (or Zindehrúd) (زندس ) which may be translated "the living "stream;" and Záïendehrúd (زاینده رود) the river that bringsforth, fertilizes or vivifies. These, however, may be variations of the same name; but according to the Seir al belâd, the stream which runs by Isfahán was entitled "Zarîn Rúd" or the "Golden River," "celebrated for the pleasantness and purity "of its water; the coarsest thread when washed in that "stream becomes as soft and fine as silk; and the source is at our author has extracted but ten distichs; it consists, however, of seventy two, or seventy five, according to different copies of that poet's Diván in my collection, each distichending with the word Sifahán (مفاهل Few Persian poets furnish so many local allusions as KHA'KA'NI; he ends every distich of another composition with the name of Rai (ري); and a poem of one hundred distichs (according to my beet copy) has the name of Khurásán (خراسان) in the second line of each.

"a certain spot called Tebakán or Betakán" (14). Nearly in the same manner one copy of EBN VARDI'S Arabick treatise above quoted celebrates the Zendehrúd; but, as I suppose through some mistake, the name appears written Nahr Zemrúd, which would signify "the river of emeralds." According to the MS. "it is famed for its pure and salubrious water; in which clothes of a rough or coarse texture being washed are rendered soft as silken garments; and it issues from a place called Melkún" (15).

In his account of the Zendrud (for so the MS. one of very doubtful accuracy, exhibits this name) we learn from Hafriz Abru that it is a considerable river which passes near Isfahan; "in some books," says the historian, "the name is written Zinehrud, which may be derived from Zarinehrud or "the golden stream," an appellation given because its water was "deemed so precious that even a drop of it should not be "lost or wasted(16);" he adds, that this river proceeds originally from the chashmeh or fountain of Jánán (5).

<sup>(14)</sup> نهر زرین رود که موصوفست بعدوته اب و لطانت آن ریسمان در متبرا جوره باب آن نهر بشوبند چون حرر زرم و الميم کردد سر چشمه آن از قر تم آست که ازرا به این کوند

<sup>(15)</sup> نور زمرود و هو نام نهان موصف بالنائة و العذربة يعسل نبيه الثوب العشرية فيصار المين من الحرير و هو نخرج من قريه يقال لها ماكان

(۱6) نهر زندرود - در نعمی کتب زینه رود نوشته اند و وجه تسمیه آن بزرینه رود انکه یک قطرهٔ آب مایع نمیشود

It is traced however by HAMDALLAH (in his Chapter on the subject of Persian Rivers) to the "Kúh Zerdeh among the "mountains of the greater Lur, and to the territory called Jui "Sarv, the "cypress stream," or fountain; having passed "through Rúdibár a district of Luristán, it proceeds to Firú-"zán and Isfahán, and is at length, after a course of eighty "farsangs, dissipated or absorbed, at Ravid Sestein in the "land of Gawkháni"(17). He notices its names, Záïendehrúd and Zarinrud; and informs us that according to some accounts, this river sinks into the ground at Gawkhani from which it runs subterraneously sixty farsangs, and then rises again in the province of Kirmán and flows into the eastern sea, دریای شرقی) the eastern part, we may suppose, of the Persian Gulf). "It is related," adds he, "that in former times, a "piece of reed, having been marked for the purpose, was "thrown into this stream at Gawkháni, and appeared again in "Kirmán" (18); but the mountains, and soil would present so many natural obstacles in the intermediate space, that HAMDALLAH is induced to consider this story as not supported by facts or even by probability. Yet in the work entitled Ajáieb al beldán or "Wonders of Regions;" the descent

ردبار (۱۲) از کوه زرده و جبال لر بزرک بعدود جوی سرو بر میخیزد بر ولایت رودبار فرستان کذشته در ولایت فیروزان و اصفهان ریزد در ناحیت روید سستین در زمین کشته در ولایت فیروزان و اصفهان منتهی میشود و طولش هشتاد فرسنک باشد Ravendsin (روندسین)

<sup>(18)</sup> و میکویند در زمان سابق نی پاره نشان کرده در کارخانی در ان اب انکفاده میدند در کرمان پیداشد

of this river into the Persian Gulf is thus mentioned without any doubt or comment. "The Zendehrúd which waters the "territory of Isfáhán, is remarkable for its purity and salu"brious qualities; from branches of its stream the gardens and villages of that place derive considerable advantage; and it falls into the sea of Fárs" (19).

The Zendehrad appears to have borne, in the ancient dialects of Persia, denominations totally different, at least in sound, from any of those above-mentioned; for the Bundehesh, according to Anquetil du Perron's translation, (Zendav. Tome II. p. 391, 393) styles it the Khréi (or Khreé) and the Mesrega roud, or Mesregantch. The extreme accuracy of that learned Frenchman is evinced, as usual, by a collation of his version with the original text. From my Manuscript copy already mentioned (p. 2) I annex (See Misc. Plate) as it appears written in Puhlavi characters, the passage respecting this river; which at present is only known by the name of Záientehrad or Zendehrad; the former being by many considered as more correct, although the latter seemed to me more generally used in conversation.

This account might easily be lengthened by extracts from other Manuscripts now before me; these, however, would add but little to our stock of knowledge, as the authors have, in general, borrowed not only the matter, but the very words of those already quoted in this chapter. All the information respecting the river Zendehrúd which I received from various persons at Isfahán in answer to my personal inquiries, agreed so nearly with notices compiled at the same time by M1'RZA' MUHAMMED SA'LEH, (a young and ingenious man of letters who accompanied our embassy from Shiráz, and has since visited England), that in translating a few, passages from his Journal, obligingly communicated to me by himself, I offer the result of our joint researches; previously mentioning one account unnoticed by him which traces the stream to a source called Chárchashmeh (جارچاک ) or the "Four Fountains," situate eighty or ninety miles westward of Isfahán.

<sup>(19)</sup> زندهرود فرولایت ادهاهانست و بعکوبه و لطانت ایب معرف و رسانههی هدر است. در مساه می است در مساه می است در مساه می است در مساه می است در مست این جر فارس است در مست

"The Zendehrud is a considerable river which rises among the mountains of Shamkheh (ها نه ) in the Bakhtyari (بانه ) in the Bakhtyari (ما ) in the Bakhtyari in the Bakhtyari in the Bakhtyari in the tribulari is situate in the territory of Char mehal (ما ) or the "Four "Districts," which, as report states, comprise from two to three hundred pargannahs (ما ) of villages (ما ), where the lands are cultivated by the Bakhtyaris and people of Char Mehal, <sup>(*)</sup> The MS. Dictionary Jehángiri informs us that pargunant significs a territory from which taxes are levied.

chiefly with wheat and barley and a little rice. After this. the river waters Linjan (انعابات or the Linjanat انعان ) a tract of country containing nearly thirty pargannahs of villages, and about eight thousand inhabitants. Rice is here the principal object of cultivation, but the soil produces also cotton, barley and wheat, some vetches, lentils, and a sufficiency of pease. Gardens are very numerous in the territory of Linján, through which the river Zendehrud passes; and there, likewise, is a bridge called Pul Vargan (پل وركان) of firm workmanship. From this to the bridge of Kelleh before-mentioned, is a distance of six farsangs. The river, after a course of three farsangs from PuliVargán, runs under another bridge of great size, the Pul i Marnun (پل مارنون) to within half a farsang of Isfahán, that city which resembles paradise (اچنت نشان); there, situate on it, is the Pul-i-chchár-bágh (يل جهارباغ), a very strong bridge and truly beautiful, erected by ALI VERDI KHA'N principal (شاه عباس) one of Sha'h Abba's's (على وردي خان) servants. About three hundred paces below this there is a short bridge called Pul-i-chubi (پل جوبي), the occasion of building which was, that the channel of the Zendehrad being here, close to the royal palaces named Haft-dest (هفت دست) and Saadet-ábad (سعادت اباد), of considerable depth, the water might be more easily conveyed into those edifices, along the upper part of the bridge. Having passed from the Pul-ichúbi three hundred paces farther, the stream arrives at the city near the gate of Khájû (خواجر), where a large and very strong bridge has been constructed; and this, which is called the Pul-i-Khájú, and the bridge of Chehârbágh, have each an upper and lower row of arches. The river then passes on to the Pul-i-Shahristán (پل شهرستان), a bridge so denominated from an extensive village on the eastern side of Isfahan; there is a minareh (مناره) or steeple, exceedingly high in the Shahristán, and this place affords a moderate crop; different sorts of barley, wheat, and other grain; the bridge here is not very long and has only ten or twelve arches. From this the river Zendehrud proceeds to the beluk ( ) or district of Beráhán (براهان), where, as the ground presents an elevated surface, a band (بند) or dyke has been constructed, to facilitate the descent of the stream, and disperse it for the purposes of irrigation among the cultivated fields; the dyke of which we have spoken, is called the band of Ali Ku'li Kha'n (على تاي خان), and the whole population of Berahán, amounts, as it is supposed, to about one thousand people. The river next flows on to Rúdesht (رودشت); this place comprehends several villages, and the inhabitants may be reckoned four thousand, their crops are reasonably abundant; and there also is a dyke, the Band-i-Merwan (يند مروان); which derives its name from a person who governed under one of the Abbási Khalifahs. Hence the Zendehrud advances to Varzeneh, (uj.) in the district of Rúdesht; and a little beyond Varzeneh, settles on the earth." I must remark that one meaning of Zendek (زنده) is "great;" yet it does not seem applied in this sense to the river by those poets who often play upon its name.

27.280

CHAPTER XIV.

Residence at Ispahán.

Le remained at Ispahán from the twenty-ninth day of July until the twenty-first of October, a space of twelve weeks, during which our residence was in the Royal Gardens of Saudetábád, where Sir Gore and Lady Ouseley occupied the extensive building called Haft-dest, comprising many ranges of apartments(1). These, when the former kings lived here, formed the Harem or Hharam () the dwellings of their wives; some chambers were still very richly gilt, painted and otherwise ornamented in the best Persian style. This edifice is not attached to any other situate within the precincts of Saadetábád gardens; the lower part is built of stone, in large and well-cut masses; the superstructure of brick; one end, a tower, appears in Plate LVI, (first view) which also represents the tálár (JV) or great open-fronted hall of the Palace hereafter de ribed.

Some gentlemen of the embassy furnished for their own accommodation the rooms or recesses in that airy and pretty, but most inconvenient structure the "European hat," (Kuláh i Frangki(²), or as it is sometimes called the namekdán (نمكدان) or "Salt cellar." Of this building, described as an octagonal pavilion by Chardin, (Tome VIII, p. 228, Rouen, 1723) I made two sketches; one the subject of Pl. LVII, (No.1) was taken near the Palace from the great walk through which runs a conduit with works for throwing up where. In this is included part of the mountain called Kúhe Saffeh (کرد منه). The same Plate, No. 2, represents the Kuláh i Frangki delineated from a spot near the garden gate, opening towards the cemetery or Kabrestan (نبرستان) of the district called Takhti-Púltá basin or fountain raised on a circular platform, from the center of which water constantly issued, and as I heard, was often projected to a considerable height.

+-----

<sup>(*) (</sup>کلاه فرنکي) So called from a funcied resemblance in its projecting roof, to the eld-fushioned kuláh or hat of the Franks or Europeans. An edifice of this kind has been mentioned in Vol. II. p. 2.

Most of us, however, preferred our tents, and pitched them among the lofty chinar (حِنار) or plane-trees, so numerous in these ample gardens. We daily assembled at that stately edifice which have denominated the Palace, being the handsomest, d principal of all that constitute the Saadetábád (سعادتاباد) or "Residence of Felicity." There the Ambassador received visits of ceremony; and there we breakfasted and dined in the magnificent and spacious "Hall of Audience," or " Dîvân Khânch" (ديوان خانه); the tâlâr or open front of which has been already represented (Pl. LVI, No. 1) and appears in a different point of view (Pl. LVI, No. 2) when seen from a door-way near the Haft-dest; whence also is discerned the Pul i Khájû (يل خواجو) or "Bridge of Khájú," as expressed in the same engraving. Of the Diván Kháneh, that splendid hall wherein we daily assembled at meals, the walls were formed at the lower part, of fine marble slabs, painted and gilded in patterns of birds and flowers.

In another place some architectural observations on this Palace, and an ichnographical sketch, shall be offered; meanwhile I proceed to record the transactions subsequent to our arrival on the twenty-ninth day of July, at Saadetábád or "the Mansion of Felicity."

We had not been many hours in this Persian Elysium before the Ambassador received a visit from Haji Mu-Hammed Husein Kha'n (عامي الدوله) the Amin ad douleh (امين الدوله), second minister of the Empire and ruler of that extensive region, which lies between Aminabad and Tehran; his son, Abdallah Kha'n (عبدالله خال being peculiarly the governor of Ispahan; but it was attributed to his father's judicious and mild administration, that this celebrated city has, within a few years made rapid advances towards its ancient degree of population, splendour and opulence.

Next morning we set out on horseback at ten o'clock in full procession, to return the Amin ad douleh's visit; and having crossed the river Zendehrúd on the bridge of Khájú we rode through several long, handsome and well-peopled streets, but had opportunities of remarking that at least as many more were in ruins and uninhabited. The great man received us at his door with much courtesy in honour of the Ambassador he had assembled all the chief personages of Ispahán; and at noon the floor of a spacious chamber was covered with ten very large trays, each containing twenty-five china bowls and dishes of various sizes(3); these <sup>(3)</sup> I have seen a still greater number at once on the floor during a zinfet (2) as grand feast or entertainment) which the prime minister at Tehrán gave in honour of the Ambassador. To indulge in the use and display of beautiful porcelain has long been among the Persians a favourite luxury. In his account of HEMA'M AD'DI'S.